

Giving Ourselves as a Gift

א"י

Rabbi Zev-Hayyim Feyer

Our thought for today is
GIVING OURSELVES AS A GIFT

True giving means giving with love. The cup of water offered to a thirsty person eases the thirst, but, given in love, the cup satisfies more than just the thirst.

GIVING OURSELVES AS A GIFT

The love of the giver enables the receiver to pass the gift on to others. Giving in love is a chain reaction that spreads from person to person.

GIVING OURSELVES AS A GIFT

Giving with love is wisdom. Within the act is contained the seed of a reward which can be reaped, for giving, as all human interaction, is subject to the law of cause and effect.

GIVING OURSELVES AS A GIFT

Wise giving comes from wise living. When we give of ourselves, we give to ourselves.

GIVING OURSELVES AS A GIFT

By being the other's maker, we enrich all of life; we experience personal satisfaction and emotional wholeness.

GIVING OURSELVES AS A GIFT

A giving self is never a fragmented self.

GIVING OURSELVES AS A GIFT

And now, let us enter the silence, taking this thought with us and resting in it
