

Forgiving by Giving
Rabbi Zev-Hayyim Feyer

Our thought for today is
FORGIVING BY GIVING

I can only know the fulness of love when I recognize that your errors are also my own.

FORGIVING BY GIVING

If I give you anger for your error, then that error remains unredeemed in both of us.

FORGIVING BY GIVING

The world needs us to redeem error. If we condemn the person with the deed, we alienate ourselves, divorcing ourselves from our roles as partners with G*d in the creation of a peaceful universe.

FORGIVING BY GIVING

As I accept myself and grow free from my errors,
 I release you from my judgment of your errors.

FORGIVING BY GIVING

When I release you, we both understand forgiveness. It is the new dimension, love, which we give for anger.

FORGIVING BY GIVING

We pardon in the degree that we love.

FORGIVING BY GIVING

And now, let us enter the silence, taking this thought with us and resting in it

FORGIVING BY GIVING